The International Olympic Committee is hosting its triennial conference on sports injury and illness prevention in Monte Carlo, Monaco from March 16 through March 18. The UF Department of Orthopaedics and Rehabilitation [4] is being represented by two of its faculty at this important event.

Dr. Jason Zaremski [8] gave a poster presentation on his research entitled "Sports-Related Elbow Ulnar Collateral Ligament Injury in the 21st Century."

Drs. Herman and Zaremski are both assistant professors who work as sports medicine physicians [9] and researchers [10] in the Department's Division of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation [11].
